- For fear, though fleeter than the wind,
Believes 'tis always left behind. Hudibras, p. iii. cant. 3.
So fierce they drove, their couriers were so fleet,
That the turf trembled underneath their feet. Dryden.
He told us, that the welkin would be clear
When swallows fleet soar high and sport in air. Gay.
Ten thousand thousand fleet ideas
Croud fast into the mind. Thomson's Autumn.
2. [In the husbandry of some provinces.] Light; superficially fruitful.
Marl cope-ground is a cold, stiff, wet clay, unless where it is very fleet for pasture. Mortimer.
3. Skimming the surface.
Those lands must be plowed fleet. Mortimer's Husbandry.
TO FLEET. v. n. [plotan, Saxon.]
1. To fly swiftly; to vanish.
How all the other passions fleet to air,
As doubtful thoughts, and rash embrac'd despair! Shakespeare.
A wolf, who, hang'd for human slaughter,
Ev'n from the gallows did his fell foul fleet. Shakespeare.
2. To be in a transient state; the same with fit.
Our understanding, to make a complete notion, must add something else to this fleeting and unremarkable superficialities, that may bring it to our acquaintance. Digby on Bodies.
Of fleeting joys
Of Paradise, dear-bought with lasting woes! Milt. P. Lost.
While I listen to thy voice,
Chloris! I feel my life decay:
That powerful noise
Calls my fleeting soul away. Waller.
As empty clouds by rising winds are tost,
Their fleeting forms scarce sooner found than lost. Prior.
TO FLEET. v. a.
1. To skim the water.
Who swelling sails in Caspian sea doth cross,
And in frail wood an Adrian gulph doth fleet,
Doth not, I ween, so many evils meet. Fairy Queen, b. ii.
2. To live merrily, or pass time away lightly.
Many young gentlemen flock to him every day, and fleet
the time carelessly as they did in the golden age. Shakespeare.
3. [In the country.] To skim milk; to take off the cream:
whence the word fleeting dish.
FLEETING-DISH. n. f. [from fleet and dish.] A skimming bowl.
FLEETLY. adv. [from fleet.] Swiftly; nimbly; with swift pace.
FLEETNESS. n. f. [from fleet.] Swiftness of course; nimble-ness; celerity; velocity; speed; quickness.
FLESH. n. f. [flesh, plære, Saxon; uiesch, Dutch; fesh, Erse.]
1. The body distinguished from the soul.
As if this flesh, which walls about our life,
Were bras impregnable. Shakespeare's Richard II.
A disease that's in my flesh,
Which I must needs call mine. Shakespeare's King Lear.
And thou, my foul, which turn'st with curious eye
To view the beams of thine own form divine,
Know, that thou can'st know nothing perfectly,
While thou art clouded with this flesh of mine. Davies.
2. The muscles distinguished from the skin, bones, tendons.
A spirit hath not flesh and bones. New Testament.
3. Animal food distinguished from vegetable.
Flesh should be forborne as long as he is in coats, or at least till he is two or three years old. Locke.
Flesh, without being qualified with acids, is too alkalescent a diet. Arbutnot on Aliments.
Acidity in the infant may be cured by a flesh diet in the nurse. Arbutnot on Aliments.
4. The body of beasts or birds used in food, distinct from fishes.
There is another indictment upon thee, for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the law. Shakespeare. H. IV.
We mortify ourselves with the diet of fish; and think we fare coarsely, if we abstain from the flesh of other animals.
Brown's Vulgar Errors.
5. Animal nature.
The end of all flesh is come before me. Gen. vi. 13.
6. Carnality; corporal appetites.
Name not religion; for thou lov'st the flesh. Shakespeare.
Fasting serves to mortify the flesh, and subdue the lusts thereof. Smalbridge's Sermons.
7. A carnal state; worldly disposition.
They that are in the flesh cannot please God. Rom. viii. 8.
The flesh lusteth against the spirit, and the spirit against the flesh. Gal. v. 16.
8. Near relation.
Let our hand be upon him; for he is our flesh. Gen.
When thou seest the naked, cover him; and hide not thyself from thine own flesh. Isa. lviii. 7.
9. The outward or literal sense. The Orientals termed the immediate or literal signification of any precept or type the flesh, and the remote or typical meaning the spirit. This is frequent in St Paul.
Ye judge after the flesh. John viii. 15.

FLE

- TO FLESH. v. a.
1. To initiate: from the sportsman's practice of feeding his hawks and dogs with the first game that they take, or training them to pursuit by giving them the flesh of animals.
Good man boy, if you please; come, I'll flesh ye. Shakespeare.
Every puny swordsmen will think him a good game quarry to enter and flesh himself upon. Government of the Tongue.
2. To harden; to establish in any practice, as dogs by often feeding on any thing.
These princes finding them so flesh'd in cruelty, as not to be reclaimed, secretly undertook the matter alone. Sidney, b. ii.
The women ran all away; saving only one, who was so flesh'd in malice, that neither during nor after the fight she gave any truce to her cruelty. Sidney, b. ii.
3. To glut; to satiate.
Harry from curb'd licence plucks
The muzzle of restraint; and the wild dog Shall flesh his tooth on every innocent. Shakespeare. Henry IV.
He hath perverted a young gentlewoman, and this night he fleshes his will in the spoil of her honour. Shakespeare.
The kindred of him hath been flesh'd upon us;
And he is bred out of that bloody strain,
That hunted us in our familiar paths. Shakespeare. Henry V.
Full bravely hast thou flesh'd
Thy maiden sword. Shakespeare's Henry IV.
FLESHROATH. n. f. [flesh and roath.] Broath made by decocting flesh.
Her leg being emaciated, I advised bathing it with flesh- broath, wherein had been decocted emollient herbs. Wyseman.
FLESHCOLOUR. n. f. [flesh and colour.] The colour of flesh.
A complication of ideas together makes up the single complex idea, which he calls man, whereof white or fleshcolour in England is one. Locke.
A loose earth of a pale fleshcolour, that is, white with a blush of red, is found in small fissures of a brown soft stone in the Skrees, a mountain in Cumberland. Woodward on Fossils.
FLESHLY. n. f. [flesh and fly.] A fly that feeds upon flesh, and deposits her eggs in it.
I would no more endure
This wooden slavery, than I would suffer
The fleshly blow my mouth. Shakespeare's Tempest.
It is a wonderful thing in fleshflies, that a fly-maggot, in five days space after it is hatched, arrives at its full growth and perfect magnitude. Ray on the Creation.
FLESHHOOK. n. f. [flesh and hook.] A hook to draw flesh from the caldron.
All that the fleshhook brought up the priest took. 1 Sa. ii. 12.
FLESHLESS. adj. [from flesh.] Without flesh.
FLESHLINESS. n. f. [from fleshly.] Carnal passions, or appetites.
When strong passions or weak fleshliness
Would from the right way seek to draw him wide,
He would, through temperance and steadfastness,
Teach him the weak to strengthen, and the strong suppress.
Fairy Queen, b. ii. cant. 4. Stan. 2.
Corrupt manners in living, breed false judgment in doctrine: sin and fleshliness bring forth sects and heresies. Ajcham.
FLESHLY. adj. [from flesh.]
1. Corporal.
Nothing resembles death so much as sleep;
Yet then our minds themselves from slumber keep,
When from their fleshly bondage they are free. Denham.
2. Carnal; lascivious.
From amidst them rose Belial, the dissolute spirit that fell,
The sensualist; and, after Asmodai,
The fleshliest incubus. Paradise Regained, b. ii.
3. Animal; not vegetable.
'Tis then for nought that mother earth provides
The stores of all she shows, and all she hides,
If men with fleshly mortels must be fed,
And chaw with bloody teeth the breathing bread. Dryden.
4. Human; not celestial; not spiritual.
Else, never could the force of fleshly arm
Ne molten metal in his flesh embrace. Fairy Queen, b. i.
What time th' eternal Lord in fleshly shrine
Enwombed was, from wretched Adam's line,
To purge away the guilt of sinful crime. Fairy Queen.
Much ostentation, vain of fleshly arm,
And of frail arms, much instrument of war
Before mine eyes thou'lt set. Milton's Par. Regained, b. iii.
FLESHMEAT. n. f. [flesh and meat.] Animal food; the flesh of animals prepared for food.
The most convenient diet is that of fleshmeat. Floyer.
In this prodigious plenty of cattle and dearth of human creatures, fleshmeat is monstrously dear. Swift.
FLESHMENT. n. f. [from flesh.] Eagerness gained by a successful initiation.
He got praises of the king,
For him attempting who was self-subdued;
And in the fleshment of this dread exploit,
Drew on me here again. Shakespeare's King Lear.
FLESHMONGER.

FLE

- FLESHMONGER. n. f. [from flesh.] One who deals in flesh; a pimp.
Was the duke a fleshmonger, a fool, and a coward, as you then reported him?
FLESHPOT. n. f. [flesh and pot.] A vessel in which flesh is cooked; thence plenty of flesh.
If he takes away the fleshpots, he can also alter the appetite. Taylor's Rule for living holy.
FLESHQUAKE. n. f. [flesh and quake.] A tremor of the body;
a word formed by Johnson in imitation of earthquake.
They may, blood-shaken then,
Feel such a fleshquake to possess their powers,
As they shall cry like ours:
In found of peace or wars,
No harp c'er hit the stars. Ben. Johnson's New-Imm.
FLESHY. adj. [from flesh.]
1. Plump; full of flesh; fat; muculous.
All Ethiopians are fleshy and plump, and have great lips; all which betoken moisture retained, and not drawn out. Bacon.
We say it is a fleshy file when there is much periphrases and circuit of words, and when with more than enough it grows fat and corpulent. Ben. Johnson's Discoveries.
The sole of his foot is flat and broad, being very fleshy, and covered only with a thick skin; but very fit to travel in sandy places. Ray.
2. Pulpous; plump; with regard to fruits.
Those fruits that are so fleshy, as they cannot make drink by expression, yet may make drink by mixture of water. Bacon.
FLETCHER. n. f. [from fleshe, an arrow, French.] A manufacturer of bows and arrows.
It is commended by our fletchers for bows, next unto yew.
Mortimer's Husbandry.
FLET, participle passive of To fleet. Skimmed; deprived of the cream.
They teach them to drink flet milk, which they just warm.
Mortimer's Husbandry.
FLEW. The preterite of fly.
The people flew upon the spoil. 1 Sa. xiv. 32.
O'er the world of waters Hermes flew,
'Till now the distant island rose in view. Pope's Odyssey, b. v.
FLEW. n. f. The large chaps of a deep-mouthed hound. Hamm.
FLEWED. adj. [from flew.] Chapped; mouthed.
My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kind,
So flew'd, so fanded, and their heads are hung
With ears that sweep away the morning dew. Shakespeare.
FLEXANIMOUS. adj. [flexanimus, Latin.] Having power to change the disposition of the mind. Diis.
FLEXIBILITY. n. f. [flexibilitas, French, from flexible.]
1. The quality of admitting to be bent; pliancy.
Do not the rays which differ in refrangibility differ also in flexibility? And are they not, by their different inflexions, separated from one another, so as after separation to make the colours? Newton's Opt.
Corpuscles of the same set agree in every thing; but those that are of diverse kinds differ in specific gravity, in hardness, and in flexibility, as in bigness and figure. Woodward.
2. Easiness to be persuaded; ductility of mind; compliance; facility.
Advise me to resolve rather to err by too much flexibility than too much perverseness, by meekness than by self-love.
Hammond's Pract. Catech.
FLEXIBLE. adj. [flexibilis, Latin; flexible, French.]
1. Possible to be bent; not brittle; easy to be bent; pliant; not stiff.
When splitting winds
Make flexible the knees of knotted oaks. Sh. Trill. and Cress.
Take a stock-gillyflower and tie it upon a stick, and put them both into a stoop glass full of quicksilver, so that the flower be covered: after four or five days you shall find the flower fresh, and the stalk harder and less flexible than it was.
Bacon's Natural History, No. 796.
2. Not rigid; not inexorable; complying; obsequious.
Phocyon was a man of great severity, and no ways flexible to the will of the people. Bacon.
3. Ductile; manageable.
Under whose care forever a child is put to be taught, during the tender and flexible years of his life, it should be one who thinks Latin and language the least part of education. Locke.
4. That may be accommodated to various forms and purposes.
This was a principle more flexible to their purpose. Rogers.
FLEXIBleness. n. f. [from flexible.]
1. Possibility to be bent; not brittleness; easiness to be bent;
not stiffness; pliancy.
I will rather chafe to wear a crown of thorns, than to exchange that of gold for one of lead, whose embased flexibleness shall be forced to bend. King Charles.
Keep those slender aerial bodies separated and stretched out, which otherwise, by reason of their flexibleness and weight, would flag or curl. Boyle's Spring of the Air.
2. Facility; obsequiousness; compliance.
3. Ductility; manageableness.
The flexibleness of the former part of a man's age, not yet grown up to be headstrong, makes it more governable. Locke.

FLI

- FLEXILE. adj. [flexilis, Latin.] Pliant; easily bent; obsequious to any power or impulse.
Every flexile wave
Obeys the blast, th' aerial tumult swells. Thomson's Summer.
FLEXION. n. f. [flexio, Latin.]
1. The act of bending.
2. A double; a bending; part bent; joint.
Of a sinuous pipe that may have some four flexions, trial would be made. Bacon's Natural History, No. 222.
3. A turn towards any part or quarter.
Pity causeth sometimes tears, and a flexion or cast of the eye aside. Bacon's Natural History, No. 71.
FLEXOR. n. f. [Latin.] The general name of the muscles which act in contracting the joints.
Flatterers, who have the flexor muscles so strong that they are always bowing and cringing, might in some measure be corrected by being tied down upon a tree by the back. Aruth.
FLEXUOUS. adj. [flexuosus, Latin.]
1. Winding; full of turns and meanders; tortuous.
In regard of the soul, the numerous and crooked narrow crannies, and the restrained flexuous rivulets of corporeal things, are all contemptible. Digby on the Soul.
2. Bending; not straight; variable; not steady.
The trembling of a candle discovers a wind, that otherwise we do not feel; and the flexuous burning of flames doth shew the air beginneth to be unquiet. Bacon's Natural History.
FLEXURE. n. f. [flexura, Latin.]
1. The form or direction in which any thing is bent.
Contrary is the flexure of the joints of our arms and legs to that of quadrupeds: our knees bend forward, whereas the same joint of their hind legs bends backward. Ray.
2. The act of bending.
The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy;
His legs are for necessity, not flexure. Shak. Trill. and Cress.
3. The part bent; the joint.
His mighty strength lies in his able loins,
And where the flexure of his navel joins. Sandys.
4. Obsequious or servile cringe.
Think'st thou the fiery fever will go out
With titles blown from adulation?
Will it give place to flexure and low bends? Shak. Hen. V.
TO FLICKER. v. a. [flickeren, Dutch; pliccequan, Saxon.]
To flutter; to play the wings; to have a fluttering motion.
Under th' allowance of your grand aspect,
Whose influence, like the wreath of radiant fire,
On flickering Phoebus' front. Shakespeare's King Lear.
'Twas ebbing darkness, past the mid' of night,
And Phosphor, on the confines of the light,
Promis'd the sun, ere day began to spring;
The tuneful lark already stretch'd her wing,
And flick'ring on her nest, made short essays to sing. Dry.
At all her stretch her little wings she spread,
And with her feather'd arms embrac'd the dead;
Then flickering to his pallid lips, she strove
To print a kiss, the last essay of love. Dryden.
FLIER. n. f. [from fly.]
1. One that runs away; a fugitive; a runaway.
Cam'st thou from where they made the stand?
—I did;
Though you, it seems, came from the fliers. Shak. Cymbel.
The gates are open, now prove good seconds;
'Tis for the followers fortune widens them,
Not for the fliers. Shakespeare's Coriolanus.
Now the fliers from and forsakers of their places, carry the parliamentary power along with them. King Charles.
2. That part of a machine which, by being put into a more rapid motion than the other parts, equalizes and regulates the motion of the rest; as in a jack.
The flier, tho't had leaden feet,
Turn'd so quick, you scarce could see't. Swift.
FLIGHT. n. f. [from To fly.]
1. The act of flying or running from danger.
And now, too late, he wishes for the fight,
That strength he wasted in ignoble flight. Denham.
He thinks by flight his mistress must be won,
And claims the prize because he best did run. Dryd. Ind. Em.
As eager of the chase, the maid
Beyond the forest's verdant limits stray'd;
Pan saw and lov'd, and, burning with desire,
Pursu'd her flight; her flight increas'd his fire. Pope.
2. Removal to another place.
The fury sprang above the Stygian flood;
And on her wicker wings, sublime through night,
She to the Latian palace took her flight. Dryden's Æn.
3. The act of using wings; volation.
For he so swift and nimble was of flight,
That from this lower tract he dar'd to fly
Up to the clouds, and thence with pinions light
To mount aloft unto the crystal sky. Spenser's Muirpitts.
Winds that tempest's brew,
When through Arabian groves they take their flight,
Made wanton with rich odours, lose their spue. Dryden.
4. Removal
